

Parents and Volunteers

Most parents' interaction with their kids' sports teams revolves around the coach and assistant coaches during practices and games. A well run club and team needs volunteers to operate smoothly. By dividing up the tasks among many parents the coach can focus on coaching the kids, the parents become more engaged in supporting their player's team and no single parent is left with all the duties.

The following is a list of potential positions at the organization and team level that cover the wide range of activities typically found in many lacrosse groups. Your organization can use these for a starting point in establishing the roles that work best for your group/team.
